

Text Complexity: Raising Rigor in Reading by Douglas Fisher, Nancy Frey and Diane Lapp

Forward – Worthy of reading – pg. ix

Chapter 1: Text Complexity is the New Black

- Text Complexity defined – pg. 2
- Revisiting How We Match Readers and Texts – pg. 5
- Text Complexity and the CCSS – pg. 7
- The Case for Struggle – pg. 10
- Conclusion – pg. 16

Chapter 2: Quantitative Measure of Text Complexity

- Word-Level Analysis – pg. 23
- Sentence-Level Analysis – pg. 24
- Conventional Readability Formulas – pg. 25
- Readability Formulas That Also Measure Readers – pg. 29
- Measuring Coreference and Cohesion – pg. 33
- Cautions and Criticisms of Readability Formulas – pg. 35
- Readability for Early Readers – pg. 36
- Conclusion – pg. 37

Chapter 3: Qualitative Measures of Text Complexity

- Considerate Texts – pg. 42
- But Not All Texts are Considerate – pg. 44
- Levels of Meaning and Purpose – pg. 49
- Structure – pg. 53
- Language Conventionality and Clarity – pg. 58
- Knowledge Demands – pg. 60
- Returning to the Hunger Games, Qualitatively – pg. 65
- Cautions and Criticisms of Qualitative Analysis of Text Complexity – pg. 67
- Conclusion – pg. 68

Chapter 4: Matching Readers to Texts and Tasks

- Exploring the Reader – pg. 77
- Exploring the Task – pg. 82
- Exploring the Question – pg. 93
- Types of Questions Matter – pg. 94
- Shifting Expectations – pg. 95
- Cautions and Criticisms of Matching Readers with Texts and Tasks – pg. 99
- Conclusion – pg. 100

Chapter 5: A Close Reading of Complex Texts

- Close Reading – pg. 106
- Close Reading Up Close in Fourth Grade: “Post-it-Notes” – pg. 122
- Close Reading Up Close in Ninth Grade: “The Road Not Taken” – pg. 127
- Conclusion – pg. 132